

Kojiya Honten

This is the originator of a boom in shio koji (fermented salt). The best of the best stores date way back to 1689. In addition to a variety of koji-fermented products, the non-alcoholic, sweet, fermented-rice drink called "drinkable IV fluid" is also very popular.

Saiki Honpo Jokado

This is one of the most popular gift shops in Saiki, filled with attractive products from the coast and villages around the city. Take some souvenirs back home, along with great memories of your trip.

Mt. Shiroyama (Tsuruya Castle Ruins)

It is a mountain loved by Doppo, who wrote that "without this mountain, Saiki would seem a strange place to me." The beautiful stone walls on the top of the mountain preserve the memory of the famous castle.

1 Usutsubo River Shobuen Garden

The best time to visit this garden is from late May to early June, when Siberian irises are in full bloom. The view of beautiful Siberian irises from the small bridge here is really worth seeing. Let's look for the Kappa believed to live in the river!

2 Goshomyojin Shrine

As the highest ranked shrine of the old Mori domain, this enshrines the most prominent local deity. This is also known as the oldest shrine in the region (said to have been built in 806) and famous for the tree of Nagi designated as a natural monument by the Government of Oita Prefecture. So, why don't you pay a visit to the god who has protected Saiki for years? Here you can also draw a fortune slip. Let's see what it says!

3 Road of History and Literature

The traces of the historic samurai house street linger on this road. In addition, the old Sakamoto residence, where the famous writer Doppo Kunikida boarded as a young man, now serves as Doppo Kunikida Museum to tell the young Doppo's stories.

4 Saiki City Historical Museum

After learning the history of Saiki at this museum, you may hear the voice of Lord Mori when you throw a look at Mt. Shiroyama. Let's take a glimpse into the thoughts of successive generations of feudal lords and local people who built and protected Saiki.

Umaimon-dori Street

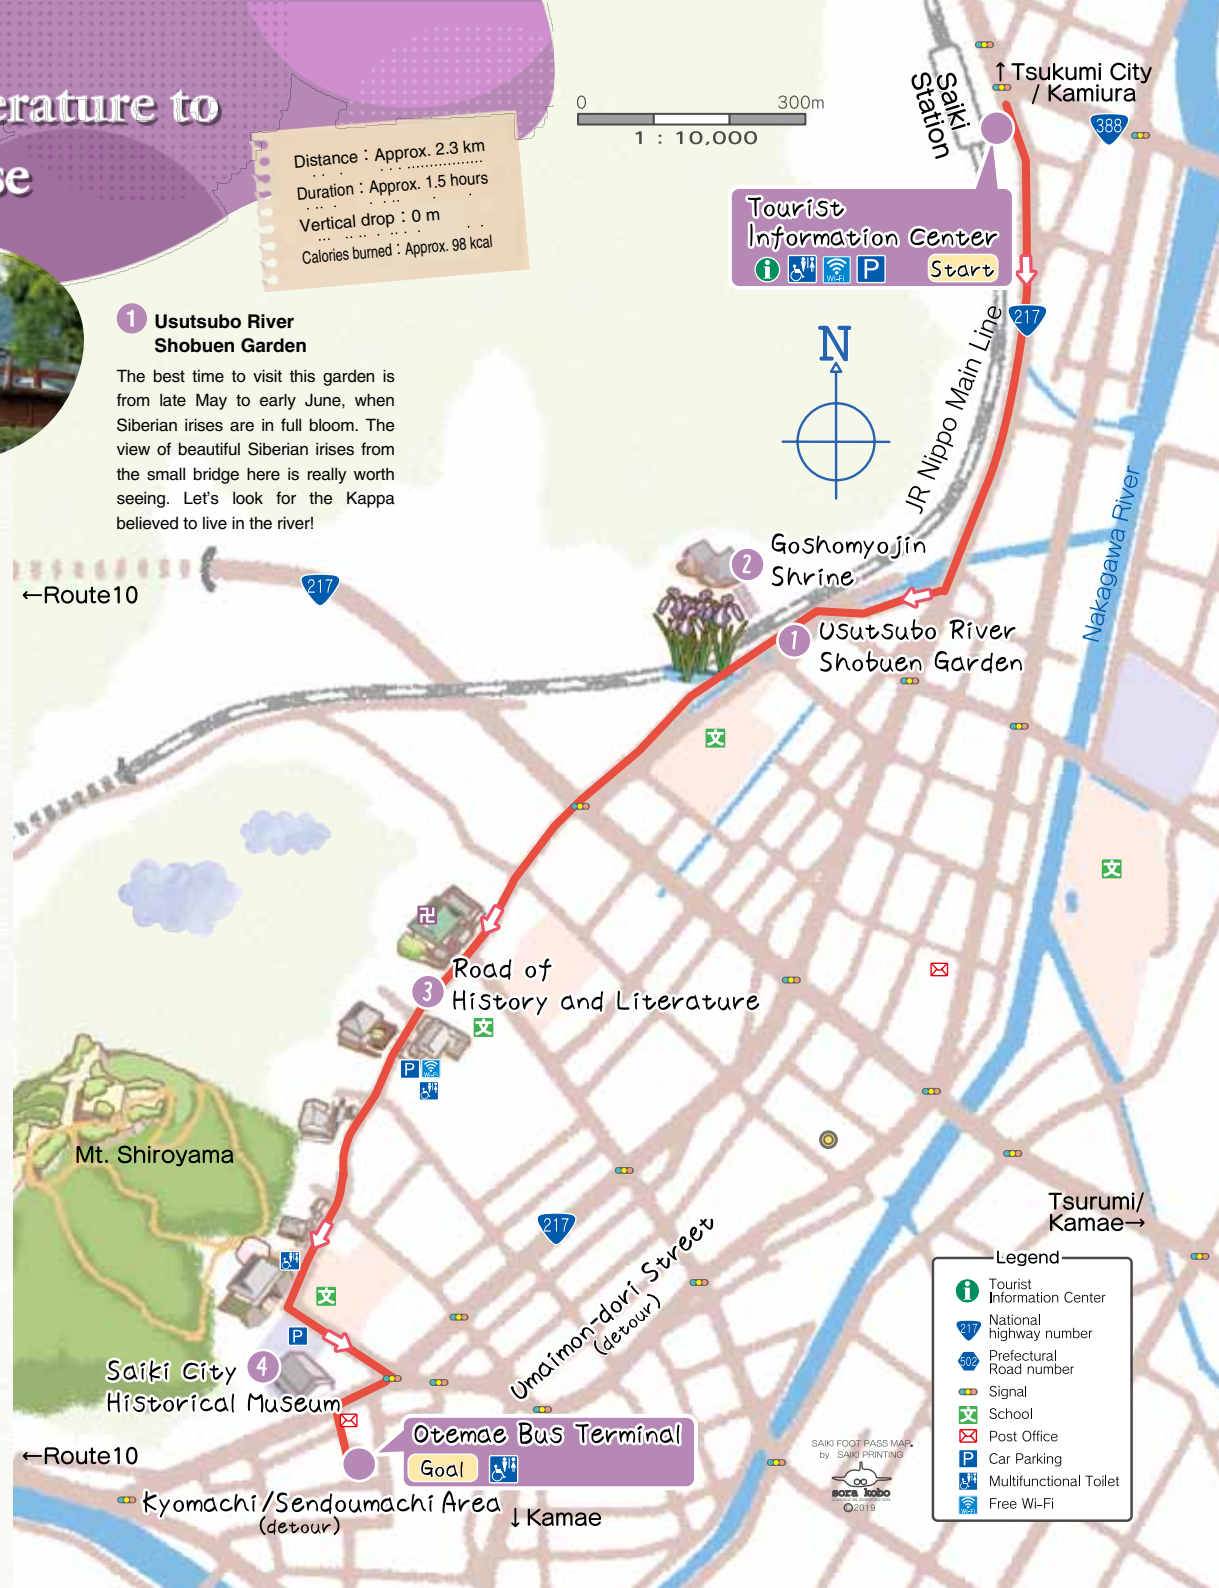

As its name suggests ("umaimon" literally means "delicious things" in Japanese), this street offers a variety of gourmet local dishes. Here on this street, chefs representing Saiki, a treasure chest of food, compete against each other.
